

Paull and Warner Resources (PWR) is committed to a robust injury management process and recognises that successful return to work relies on the active participation of all relevant parties, including the injured worker, company management, treating medical practitioners and the insurer.

We work with our team members (staff and contractors) and clients to ensure that all our business decisions support our aim of Target Zero.

PWR is committed to:

- Providing the necessary resources for injury prevention as well as immediate assistance by suitably trained and equipped first-aid officers when necessary
- Ensuring all managers and supervisors are committed to achieving the standards and time frames set for the reporting of work injuries
- Providing the best possible response to the management of injured workers adhering to the requirements of applicable legislation
- Recognising that successful injury management relies on the active participation and cooperation of the injured worker
- Developing a consultative approach to injury management between workers and managers to ensure that this process is reviewed regularly for effectiveness
- Prompt and diligent processing of all workers compensation claims in relation to work related injury or illness
- Working with the injured worker and their treating medical practitioner to achieve a safe and timely return to work
- Identifying and providing appropriate suitable duties and return to work programmes to assist an injured worker to return to meaningful work whilst recovering from a work-related injury or illness.
